Please keep the code requirement. The people crying out to drop it only want a free ride. At least for now, there is one small scrap of each band where I can congregate with other people who I know love the science of electronics and have respect for ham radio enough to work hard for it. I use phone too, but more and more it's sounding like where CB'ers graduate to. What's next, remove all technical proficiency requirements?